Federation Has Busy Session

Members Re-elected—Clubs Announce Plans for Next Season—Addresses on Many Subjects—Last Meeting Until October.

The annual meeting as well as the open meeting of The Federation of Women's Clubs was held on Saturday afternoon at the chapel of the First Reformed Church. Dr. Mary Gage-Day, chairman, presiding.

Following the reading of the minutes of the last open meeting and the executive committee meeting by the secretary, Mrs. Cora Drake, the treasurer's report was given by Miss Mary Healy. It showed $44.31 in the treasury (of which $22 belongs to the Public Health Committee) after paying over to the trustees of the Kingston City Library the sum of $200. The receipt of the latter sum was acknowledged by Frank Connelley, treasurer of the library, who on behalf of the board of trustees expressed appreciation of the generous gift. Miss Healy also reported on the work for blind babies in this city under the Federation, that the sum of $15.10 had been sent through the Federation, which had collected that amount from affiliated clubs, to the proper authorities. A letter of acknowledgement from the International Sunshine Society was received and expressing gratitude for the money which will provide raters for the blind babies at Summit, N. Y. for some time to come. No toy appeals to the blind babies as much as a noise-producing toy.

A communication was read from the Buffalo Federation of Women's Clubs calling attention to the peculiar fitness of Mrs. Frank H. Mesinger as a candidate for the office of second vice-president when the annual election occurs in November at Lake Placid.

The reports given from various clubs were all forward-looking, telling what they were planning to do next year, rather than what they have accomplished this year. The Monday Club will take up the study of history by means of lectures given by Prof. Texter of Vassar College who will probably speak on "Problems in Recent History."

The Lowell Club will make a study of "A Cross Section of the History of the Past Twenty Years" and in connection with the United States will consider the nation, the state and the city in which we live.

Nature Writers will be the study subject of the Atharhacton Club. The Coterie members will devote their time to a consideration of Spain, the Land of the Castanet.

The Olympian Club will combine subjects in their study, "Modern Drama and Travelogues," and will take up the drama of the lands visited in the travelogue.

Sociosis members will make a study of "Africa."

The Twentieth Century Club will study "Timely Topics," including literature, music, history, art, etc.

The School Women's Club of the Hudson Valley does not do any particular studying as they meet only once a month, but they have been and will continue to be deeply interested in a consideration of the legislation relative to equal pay for women and men.

The W. C. T. U. is devoting all its energies to the subject of "Law Enforcement."

Miss Louise Van Hovenberg, who is chairman of the lecture course committee for the lectures to be given next year, gave her report, in which she said that Stefansson, the world famous Arctic explorer and most interesting lecturer, has been secured to lecture in November. The date and place is pending.

The other lecturer coming to Kingston in January will be Stephen Leacock, known as "The Canadian Laugh." It was voted to charge $2 for course tickets and $1.50 for the Stefansson lecture, and all Federation members were urged to interest all of their friends in the lecture course.

Mrs. A. Ray Powley, chairman of the membership committee, reported 12 new individual members with 12 new members this year. Two new organizations have been added to the Federation enrollment. There have been six resignations and two members were dropped for the non-payment of dues.

Dr. Day announced that as the program for the year in the Federation had been "Better Homes in Kingston," she thought the women of the Federation might be interested in knowing something more definite about the transient home for guests to Kingston—the new hotel about to be undertaken. She thereupon introduced Mr. Johnston of the American Hotel Corporation who spoke interestingly and informally about the new hotel project.

Announcement was made of the Star East drive for money and clothing to take place next week.

Miss Haldane, representing the Ulster Garden Club, told of the gift in Kingston of the pool at Academy Green by Mrs. Charles F. Cantine and the cooperation of the Ulster Garden Club in making this park one of lasting and unusual beauty.

Miss Haldane asked for cooperation for the Academy Green ball to be given at the Armory on June fourth.

The report of the nominating committee, Mrs. A. Ray Powley, chairman, was received and accepted and the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot for the re-election of all present officers as follows: President, Dr. Mary Gage-Day; first vice-president, Mrs. Clyde E. Wonderly; second vice-president, Mrs. Samuel M. Watter; recording secretary, Mrs. Cora Drake; corresponding secretary,

President Back At Desk Today

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Washington, May 19.—President Coolidge was so far recovered from his heavy cold, contracted last week, that he resumed his desk in the executive offices today and fulfilled engagements.

"Very few traces of the president's cold remain," said Dr. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, "and he has no cough."

The meeting was then turned over to Mrs. O'Meara, chairman of the public health committee, who said that she felt that all women of the community fully appreciate the value and importance of child welfare work. For some time The Junior League has been supporting a full-time child welfare nurse and the Federation, particularly the public health committee, had cooperated wherever possible. In order to add to the interest in this work, Mrs. O'Meara said the public health committee took pleasure in presenting Dr. Elizabeth Gardner of the State Department of Maternity, Infancy and Child Hygiene who would tell of her work and in what way the Federation could cooperate therein.

Dr. Gardner said that while communities today usually realize their own needs and their own facilities in handling those needs, many of them do not know or understand what and how much help they can have from the State Department of Health. There is what is known as the Shepherd-Towner fund for public health work in the state. Before that work was reorganized along the lines made possible by the Shepherd-Towner fund, the welfare work was carried on under the "Davenport Moore Act." One of the things done under the older act was the inspection and supervision of midwives, so that today we have in New York State outside of New York city and Rochester some four or five hundred licensed midwives whose manner of work was continually supervised, and their equipment inspected, etc., while in addition educational courses were provided for them. Furthermore, with the raising of the standard for licensed midwives, the number had decreased. Then there was the Rural School Child Health Unit, which visited rural communities and made free examinations of children of pre-school age, thus insuring healthier children for entrance to the schools later. The more inaccessible places were visited in the summer, those easy of access at any convenient season throughout the year.

The result of the examinations was sent to family physicians for correction where needed by local doctors or state or local health nurses.

Again, there was the department for the care of crippled children, an outgrowth of the comparatively recent epidemic of infantile paralysis. The state provides nurses to go about the state, looking after the post-polio cases, giving muscle tests; seeing that the apparatus worn by patients is all right, etc. This work has been going on so long that some of the patients have reached adult years.

The matter of health publicity and education is constantly being carried on in one way or the other, even the radio being called into service now, and the best professional ideas and men are continually being called to service. Another service the child gives is the inspection of all child welfare institutions, where they aid and advice, so that where they were formerly unlicensed and unregulated they are now all under a license and are continuing to improve. Since the acceptance of the Shepherd-Towner bill and funds, specialists in obstetrics and pediatrics who are needy and to individuals such as the federation, if some case is brought to their attention. Distinguished lecturers are also to be had free of charge. Furthermore it has been found that the pre-natal clinics and mobile units have done much to reduce both the death rate of mothers and infants.

The woman physician as well as among the foreign-born women who in their own countries have been accustomed to mid-wives only. There is much follow-up work done. All of this aid is given ethically, that is, no physician's patient is examined without the wish or request of the physician or the family.

Mothers' groups are formed in many communities where either a state nurse or local nurse considered qualified instructs the mothers as to pregnancy, confinement and the care of the baby. Where communities have no nurse of their own, a public health nurse from the state is often loaned, and the community from such experience learns to realize its own needs.

Dr. Gardner also told how health surveys were carried on and their value; of the effectiveness of the nutrition work accomplished by the state service, free to any asking; community.

It was disclosed that Kingston had not availed itself of its share of the Shepherd-Towner fund because of the excellent work already being carried on here and financed by the Junior League young women, who for some time have employed a full-time children's nurse, Miss Doris Hasbrouck, who was asked to speak about her work. Miss Hasbrouck told briefly but interestingly of the start in child welfare work made by The Junior League before the war in maintaining a child-welfare station and place where working mothers might take their children for proper care. Since the war, these young women have joined the National Junior League. Miss Hasbrouck told of what she was actually doing for children in the com-

Hotel Campaign Begins Tonight

The real campaign for the sale of stock in Kingston's new hotel will begin tonight after the 190 salesmen have met and dined at the Y. M. C. A. There have been sales made, but these were preliminary to the big campaign to enlist the financial support and personal interest of as many persons as possible in the new hotel. With a thousand small stockholders the hotel will have a thousand loyal boosters in the community and it is to get this thousand that the 190 men and women who have already bought stock themselves will work for the next week.

A large number of small stockholders is the biggest asset and the greatest safeguard the new hotel can have. Direct financial interest will make a booster of every stockholder and no management will ever dare to risk turning these boosters into knockers by attempting any trickery or permitting the hotel to be operated in any but the best manner. The big fish will never dare attempt to eat the little fish. To do so would bring on a fatal case of indigestion.

At the meeting this evening at 6:30 those who have taken subscriptions in advance of the official opening of the campaign will report and The Freeman predicts that these reports will afford a delightful surprise to everybody concerned, with the exception of the members of the It-Can't-Be-Done Club, who will be anything but pleased.

The It-Can't-Be-Done Club is in for another defeat.

Boxing Bouts Here Wednesday

The boxing bouts at the armory Wednesday evening promise to be the best staged here so far under the direction of the local artillery company. Forty rounds are scheduled on the program. The main bout will bring together Willie Walker, world's colored middleweight champion, and Johnny McLaughlin of Philadelphia, and it promises to be interesting.

The semi-final between Bobby Wagner and Jimmy Foley, also promises to furnish some real skill in the art of fistcluffs. The remaining bouts will be made up of two six round bouts and three fours. The opening battle will start at 8:45 o'clock, daylight saving time.

The American team won by 17 to 3, in a sensational hard fought contest. Several French sport writers accuse the Americans of "playing brutally." The French press on the whole deplored the incident, especially the hissing which began when the United States flag was raised in token of the American victory.

French Show Poor Sportsmanship

Paris, May 19.—Gideon Nelson, of Dekalb, Ill., who was struck over the head with a cane during the disorders that attended the victory of the United States Rugby football team over the French Olympic team at Colombes Stadium, was reported recovering at the American Hospital at Neuilly. His condition is not serious.

The American team won by 17 to 3, in a sensational hard fought contest. Several French sport writers accuse the Americans of "playing brutally." The French press on the whole deplored the incident, especially the hissing which began when the United States flag was raised in token of the American victory.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale
BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER
THE BIRTHDAY PARTY

Winnie was seven years old and she had six of her friends at her birthday party.

That made seven in all, and of course, seven sat down at the table, and seven played the games, and there were seven candles on the cake.

That is—there were seven little candles on the cake. There was one big candle in the center. The candles were yellow, for yellow was Winnie's favorite color.

And the cake was decorated with white and yellow icing. There were little flowers of yellow upon it, and everyone at the table had a yellow paper cap to wear.

There were yellow daffodils upon the table too, and Winnie wore a yellow dress.

When the cake was put in front of Winnie everyone made wishes and blew out the candles. Then the great big candle was put into a big crust of bread and that crust of bread was upon a plate right in front of Winnie and along side of the cake.

For Winnie had been told an old story of the good luck that came if anyone kept the center candle of a cake—the candle one was to "grow up" burning until it burnt quite out.

She curled up in her mother's lap.

That meant that anyone would have a long life and lots of luck.

So the candle burnt steadily all through the supper party, and even when they were all through it was still burning down.

Of course it was not an enormous candle, and after a little while it was all burnt out—all of its own accord—and that meant Winnie was to have good luck and long life.

Everyone cheered just as the candle flicked out after it had burned down by itself steadily.

It was fun, Winnie thought, to make wishes like that and do little special things like that.

Of course she knew the candle's burning wouldn't really be responsible for her good luck to come, but the wishing and the fun of all this made a party so nice—particularly a birthday party.

In the cake were all sorts of little things and they were all wrapped up in tissue paper and made quite good-sized little packages.

The minute you had a piece of cake you could see whether there was anything in it or not.

There was a button in the cake and a ring and a 10-cent piece and a little silver wish bone and a little silver bell and a little silver toy dog.

There was also a little silver cat. And, as luck would have it, each one got a prize.

After the supper was over and the ice cream and the cake and the candies had been eaten they all danced and played games.

They had a splendid time and it was hard for the guests to go home, and hard for Winnie to see them go.

After they had left she curled up in her mother's lap and said:

"Oh, dear, I almost wish I could be seven years old on my next birthday, too, as I never had so much fun at any of my parties as I've had at this one."

But that was a wish Winnie knew she could not have come true.

For next year it would be her eighth birthday. There would be no changing of that!

Tommy Followed Instructions

Little Tommy Truffle had made discovery, and, being of a generous disposition, was eager to share it with others.

"I is—" he began.

Teacher swooped down at once, that superior smile so irritating to the sensitive mind of youth upon her lips.

"I am, not 'I is,'" she corrected.

Tommy looked a little pained; almost a little doubtful. But he was an obedient boy.

"I am the ninth letter of the alphabet," he announced.

Heavy Consumers of Fish

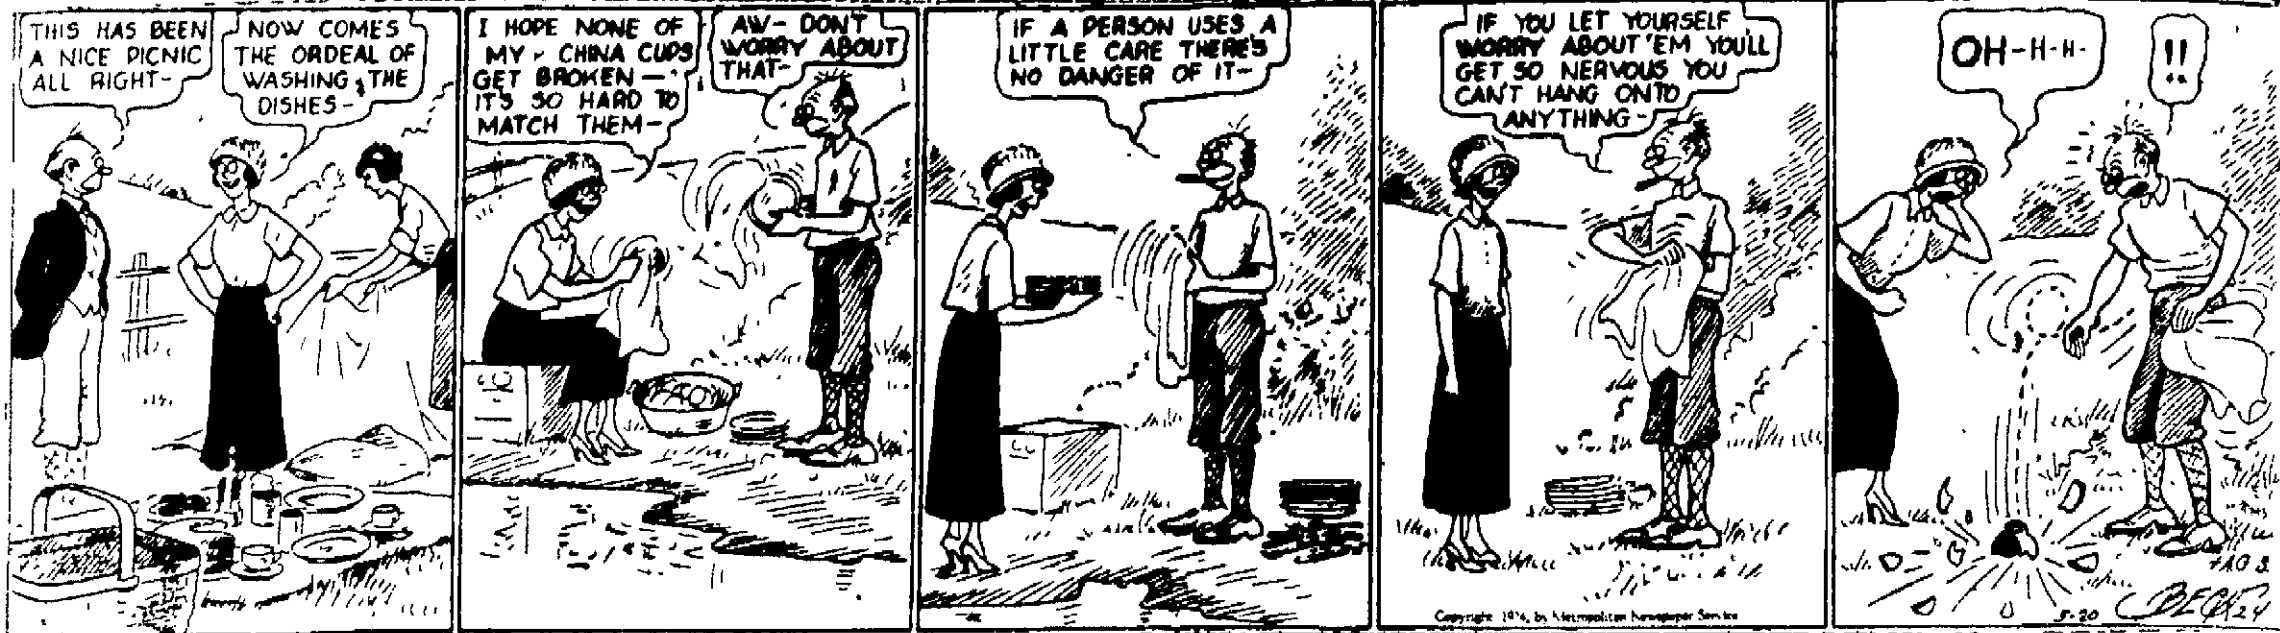

That the people of Massachusetts are the champion fish eaters of the country is indicated by figures which show that 66 per cent of all the fish landed at Boston, which is the largest fishing port in the United States, is consumed in the Bay state.

Ah! Hal!

LIGHT DESSERTS FOR WARM DAYS

A dessert is quite as acceptable on hot days as on cold, but one likes something cooling and easy of digestion. Gelatin lends itself nicely to such desserts.

Cherry Mousse—Soak one tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in one-quarter of a cupful of cold water, dissolve in one-quarter cupful of boiling water, add one and one-half cupfuls of stoned canned cherries, cut into halves, and one-half cupful of the juice. When the mixture begins to thicken add the whites of two eggs, beaten stiff. Mold and chill. Remove from the mold to a serving dish and garnish with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored with almond, sprinkle with blanched shredded and roasted almonds.

Coffee Sponge—Soak two table-spoonfuls of granulated gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water and add two cupfuls of hot strong coffee then add one cupful of sugar. Set into a pan of ice water and when it begins to thicken beat with an eggbeater until quite stiff. Add the whites of three eggs beaten stiff, and continue beating until the mixture is stiff enough to hold its shape. Turn into a mold dipped into cold water and chill. Serve garnished with whipped cream when unmolded.

Lemon Crumb Pie—Grate the rind and take the juice of a lemon. Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter with five tablespoonfuls of sugar. Stir the mixture into one and one-half cupfuls of hot milk and cool, add the yolks of three eggs well beaten and the lemon juice and rind. Line a pie plate with an inch layer of buttered crumbs and pour in the mixture. Cover when baked firm with a meringue made from the whites of the eggs beaten stiff and three tablespoonfuls of sugar added. Brown and serve cold.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

SAUL G. BLYTHE FIFTY-SIX TODAY

Samuel George Blythe, author of political novels entertaining commentators on American public men and affairs, war correspondent and globe-trotter, will be fifty-six years old today. Mr. Blythe went to Europe soon after war was declared and spent some time in England and France writing articles on the human side of the conflict. He made an attempt to go to the front nor to report news of battles or military matters, but he drew many illuminating pictures of the side-issues of the gigantic struggle. Since then Mr. Blythe has visited Japan to get first-hand information about the feeling in that country, and his deductions are very comforting to those citizens of the Pacific coast who have long expected to wake up some fine morning and find an armed and uniformed son of Nippon patrolling the street in front of his house. Mr. Blythe has interviewed many prominent Japanese statesmen and financiers in regard to the possibility of war between their country and the United States, and has reached the conclusion that Nippon has already reached the limit in the burden of taxation, and could not finance a great war even if she wanted to. The correspondent of the Saturday Evening Post finds that "the chiefest concern of Japan is not to expand her territory, but to expand her commerce, not to increase her martial glory, but to increase her bank balances, not to fight, but to acquire."

Mr. Blythe ranks with Mr. Bok, George Horace Lorimer and Irvin S. Cobb as among the most celebrated of Mr. Curtis's young men. He has been on the staff of the Saturday Evening Post since 1907. Born in Geneseo, N. Y., May 19, 1868, he started his journalistic career on the Buffalo Express. He was afterward editor-in-chief of the Buffalo Courier and Enquirer, managing editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine, and chief Washington correspondent of the New

Up the trail

HAVE you ever followed a zigzag mountain trail—a little trail that often changes its mind . . . that always climbs?

It's a wise trail. It avoids the rocks that might stop its progress. It wants to reach the top.

Advertisements help you wisely to change your mind. They turn you away from the soaps and shoes you thought you would buy, and induce you to purchase better soaps and better shoes at no greater cost. Advertisements steer you right. They want you to reach the peak of comfort and satisfaction.

Read the advertisements to buy shrewdly. They save you disappointments, they guide you to the best.

Every advertisement is a guide-post to better buying.

JOHN'S HOPKINS.

The first department of Johns Hopkins University was opened in 1876 three years after the death of the founder, Johns Hopkins, was born in Maryland 130 years ago today, and died on Dec. 24, 1873. The man whose name and fame find perpetuation in the great Baltimore institution of learning started in business as a wholesale grocer in the Maryland metropolis, and later became largely interested in financial institutions and in the Baltimore & Ohio railway. He left the bulk of his wealth to found the university and hospital with which his name is associated. He announced his intention of establishing a university in Baltimore some years before his death, and the institution was incorporated in 1867. After Hopkins died the project was immediately put under way, and in 1876 the department of philosophy was opened. Daniel C. Gilman was the first president of Johns Hopkins, and was succeeded in 1901 by Dr. Ira Remsen, who gave way to Dr. Frank J. Goodnow, the present head. Johns Hopkins is now numbered among the great American universities, and its medical department is especially famous.

Barbaric Jewelry Is
New Fashion Favorite

It is strange that at this stage of modern life, where the freedom of woman is expressed not only in her actions but in the borrowing of the superficial aspects of men's garments, there should be, at the same time, a wave of popularity for jewelry of a barbaric nature, almost a "throw-back" to the days when women were slaves to men. Red gold appears again in jewelry, and the precious colored gems, emeralds and rubies encrusted upon the black and white of onyx and diamonds. Bangles, girdles, hatpins as gorgeous as the jewels of an Eastern potentate, are worn by the women of this hemisphere.

And, after all, this is not so strange. Fashion, working through the various mediums of costume, jewelry and headdress, balances itself and when the pendulum swings too far in costume toward a severe masculinity of line it is counterbalanced by an extravagance of jewelry.

The fob, or "regence" watch, has come into its own as an accessory for the tailor. Of onyx bordered with diamonds it is worn either in a small upper pocket or in the pocket of the inner vest. There are also fob ornaments for the same purpose, simulating watches.

An engaging novelty which is a development of the fob watch is the seal watch worn around the neck on a long black cord or narrow jeweled chain. This is in the form of a seal with the face of the watch underneath and is turned up when the wearer desires to know the time. These costly trifles combine onyx, diamonds and rubies.

Jeweled Ornaments on Millinery and Slippers

Another instance of a way in which jewelry complements the mode is in the use of jeweled ornaments on the small, dark hat which is the fitting accompaniment of the masculine tailleur. On these the originality of both milliner and jeweler meet happily. There are jeweled buckles and fob ornaments, usually in diamonds. The jeweled hatpin, worn in front of the hat crown, is another recent innovation. This is shown in onyx and diamonds with red gold.

The slipper which completes the tailored mode is again feminized by a buckle, sometimes jeweled. A quaint conceit is the use of the initials in diamonds, either placed at the front of the shoe or slightly to the side.

Newest in Aprons

Lots of clever people are always trying to make life easier for women—and goodness knows there is room enough! The newest thing is the "over-clean" apron, which looks like crocheted or fancy satin, but is water and grease-proof, and needs only sponging over when it is dirty. For housework and nursery wear it's delightful to have these, as they are well cut in many shapes and, being of soft fabric, fall into graceful folds which the ordinary waterproof apron never does.

Beads Popular in London

Many of the London stores have established head departments to meet the increasing demand for bead necklaces, chains and other ornaments. A stone for which there has been much demand lately is the "chalcodony," which is mentioned in the Book of Revelation. Others that are popular are Persian jaspers, Baltic amber, Chinese jade and imitation Indian cornelian.

MEN AND WOMEN IN NEWS OF THE DAY.

Edna WALLACE HOPPER and EDNA WALLACE HOPPER
Below EDWARD PAYSON WESTON and SIR ADAM BEECE

Edna Wallace Hopper, rejuvenated actress, announced in Los Angeles, that she is soon to marry a British Army officer in China. She declined to give his name, declaring she had "lost a couple that way."

Sir Adam Beece, chairman of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, Canada, is leading the attack on the right of Chicago to take so much water from Lake Michigan for the sanitary district of Chicago as to be an encroachment on the rights of Canada and the State of New York. It is estimated the diverted water causes a loss of $500,000 electric horsepower.

The Duchess of Westminster, wife of England's richest peer, is said to be seeking a divorce in London because her husband refused her permission to use his London palace for a charity ball.

Edward Payson Weston, 54-year-old world famous pedestrian, was shot in the leg and seriously beaten by a mob in his lonely home near Kingston, N. Y. Mystery surrounded the attack.

How Peruvians Devised System of Enumeration

Most persons are familiar with representations of the hieroglyphics of the ancient Egyptians. By means of the engraved marks found on the monuments and other records the old Egyptians could represent object ideas suggested by objects and even sounds. This signifying of sounds by means of symbols formed nearly a true alphabet.

In Mexico the Aztecs had a crude system of picture writing by which sensible objects could be accurately depicted, but beyond that it could not go, for it was incompetent to convey abstract ideas. Possibly the crudest invention of this sort was the mysterious science of the quipus, which was taught the Peruvian princes by their ancestors, or "wise men."

While both systems before mentioned seemed primitive, this one is even more so, and yet it served a purpose, and a very good one, too. This quipus was a string of rope, usually about two feet in length, composed of many colored strings twisted together. To this main cord were fastened numbers of loops of different colors tied into knots.

These knots, thus forming a fringe, were fastened to the device its name, for the word quipus signifies a "knot."

The colors represented sensible objects. For example white might stand for silver and yellow for gold. Occasionally they suggested ideas abstractly—white signified peace and red war.

The chief use of the quipus was for arithmetic purposes. The knots took the place of figures and could be combined to represent numbers to any amount desired. The colors of the strings explained the subjects to which the numbers referred, and in this way the Peruvians devised a complete system of enumeration.

Walden Beat Chevrolet Nine

The Chevrolet team of this city lost to the Walden team Saturday in a hard fought game, 7 to 6. Taylor hurled for the local outfit and allowed 19 hits. The local team gathered 14 hits. Didzik and Sickler led with the stick, each hitting four safe blows. Taylor had one bad inning—the third, when the Walden nine piled up the runs. The score:

Where Realization Beats Anticipation

One of the most delightful experiences that I know comes to me when ever I leave the city and plunge for a time into the wilderness. It does not matter how prosaic the transition; I may stumble, laden with baggage, to a hot and crowded train, in which stodgy men are forever bowed over the sporting page and tired women are scolding peevish children and scattered fragments of their too generous lunches cover the floor; the train may snort and fume its tedious way through leagues of suburban ugliness. All that does not matter. I can shut my eyes with the sense of a blessed release, for I know that at the end of the journey there is tranquility, writes William Chase Greene in the North American Review. Long before I have actually reached the hills I can feel the breath of the pine forest, I can feel the coolness of that first dip in the lake closing about me; already I am standing at the edge of a cliff, watching the cloud shadows on the distant range.

The peculiar delight of the adventure, however, is that realization always surpasses anticipation. That dip in the lake is always more deliciously cool than I had imagined; the stillness of the mountain side, the broken chorus of bird notes, the hushed voice of a hidden waterfall, the whiteness of the forest flowers, always overcome me with a new surprise. The very sense of remoteness, though eagerly expected, seems unexpected.

Origin of Earring

Gypsies, some Spaniards and Indians still cling to the ancient custom of piercing the ear and suspending various grotesque figures from it. The idea of piercing the ear has gone into almost universal disuse, although one time the medical profession even suggested that piercing was beneficial to the organ of hearing.

Long before the dawn of civilization earrings were almost as important in jewelry as today. At the height of her power Greece adopted the earring both men and women wearing it. The Greeks were the pace-setters in styles in those days, it would seem, for the Romans did not incline so noticeably toward the movement until it had been well grounded in Athens.

Then Rome wasn't satisfied with the limitations of the earring, so her style dictators proceeded to make variations. The distinctiveness of the earrings in Rome was the addition of weight.

Neon Lighting

For the first time in Great Britain an installation of neon lighting is now being applied outside the London Coliseum. The apparatus is one of the most interesting evolved since the introduction of electric lighting. Neon lighting is carried out by means of glass tubes from which the air has been exhausted and replaced by a small quantity of pure neon gas at a pressure very much below ordinary atmospheric pressure. This neon gas is rendered incandescent by the passage of a high voltage alternating current, passing between two metal electrodes fitted at the ends of the tube, the color of the incandescent gas being a peculiarly rich form of flame color. By means of a rotary converter the direct current supplied from the street mains is converted into alternating current that is required to operate the light.—Chemical Age (London).

BRIMS DO THE UNEXPECTED AGAIN
(By Eleanor Gunn.)

Buying a hat is always something of an adventure, but now it draws one into all sorts of experiences and results in complete discouragement unless one belongs to the fraternity of the bobbed. It is no longer what kind of hat do I want, but what sort of a hat can I get on my head? Milliners now approach you with a tape measure and set about finding something to fit you, registering scorn as they smooth their closely marcelled boyish bob. Even on the shingle head, hats fit like a vise, yet with all this, there is talk of the large hat returning.

The most startling innovation in hats is the use of velvet at this season. Velvet and Milan is a stunning combination and velvet and Leghorn have always had an affinity for each other. But the all velvet hat is not usually seen before August, and then disappears for several seasons, velvet apparently being out of tune with fashion's mood.

One model had a Leghorn crown and underbrim, and a velvet upper brim. Others have velvet facings and crowns, and many have velvet ribbon bows and bows and flanges, matching the straw or in contrast. Paris also approves colored velvets while retaining a loyalty to black.

Plaid hats with scarfs to match are numerous in sports circles and sailors with their high crowns draped with figured foulards and crepes are apt to have an accompanying scarf. A merry war continues to be waged between dull and shiny silks and more and more frequently they are used together in sectional crowns, but all crowns which seem sectional are not actually so. Many have narrow braid so applied so as to simulate scallops, starlike points and other designs.

Cuts two operations from your washing no rubbing—no bluing

Here it is—the greatest little aid to washing that ever was invented! Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of La France with your soap when you put the clothes to soak or boil, and half the work is done. No back-breaking rubbing. No bluing.

With La France, you just soak or boil the clothes, then rinse and wring, and your work is over. La France blues as it cleans. And how it does clean! You'll say it's magic—the clothes are so snowy white and sweet.

Use La France with any soap you like—bar, powder or flakes. Or use it in the washing machine. All the sticky, greasy dirt is washed away twice as quick when La France, too, is used. Ask your grocer for it. 10 cents a package.

Ask him also for Satina. Add it to the hot starch. Prevents the iron from sticking, and gives a soft glossy finish. It also imparts a delightful fragrance to the clothes. La France Manufacturing Company, Philadelphia.

La France blues as it cleans. Loosens every sticky, greasy particle of dirt so it can be easily rinsed away. Use it with soap of any brand or kind.

Only 3½ cents each wash-day for this wonderful product that does away with all the drudgery of washing. For boiler, tubs or washing machine.

N. Y. M. A. Easily Won Track Meet

Field at Cornwall Saturday—Locals Fail to Qualify in Any Event—Duso Track Meet Saturday.

The New York Military Academy track team easily won the track meet held at Cornwall Saturday. The cadets gathered up a total of 69 points. Port Jervis was second with 31½ points. Walden High School made ten and Newburgh Academy nine. The track team of the local school made only one point. The locals had hard luck in the sprints, their men coming in third in both heats. The rule was that the first two in each heat were qualified for the finals. The locals did not qualify for one event. Nevertheless they are not as bad as the above sounds because the N. Y. M. A. track team would have made a large number of the small colleges of the country step fast to beat them. The meet gave Coach Dumm an opportunity to see his men working under good conditions and he is very optimistic about the outcome of the Duso League meet.

The first event was the 100 yard dash. Fred Clarke, captain of the local team, and H. Merrill were entered in this event. Clarke came in third in his heat. The finals were won by Buell of N. Y. M. A. in 10 3-5 secs.

THE OFFICE CAT

By Janine

Why, a certain man wants to know, does a woman who never asks her husband about anything she does ask him about forty times a day what he would do if she got her hair bobbed?

Consider the Others.
"He dances beautifully," sighed the impressionable girl.
"Take my advice," answered Gladys, "and don't deprive society of his accomplishment. It would be a shame for him to get married and have to stay home nights."

They say that Adam was the first radio bug. He made a loud speaker from his spare ribs.

To be properly weighed in the social scale it is necessary to have a cash balance.

Experience is what you get while you are looking for something else.

The line is busy, may be good English, but it is bad news.

Life is not so short but that there is always room for courtesy.

"Were you ever in a railroad accident?"

"Yes, I kissed the wrong girl once when we went through a tunnel."

They say a man always gets just what he is looking for—which is very true—unless he is looking for something good.

Living is expensive but worth it.

Many a cheap fountain pen signs a bad check.

Leaders are not made by appointment or resolution.

"The more mud you throw the more ground you lose." Candidates take notice.

Learn to depend on yourself and then, no matter what happens, somehow or another you can get along for a while. Otherwise you're lost.

Slipovers For Sports Wear

THERE'S many a slipover "twist" the cup and the fairway. This handy and serviceable knit garment will prove one of the favorites of the spring and summer season, not only for the golfer but for the tennis player, the canoeist and, in fact, for every man who hearkens to the call of the outdoors.

Known variously as the slipover and slipon, the pullover and pullon, this sweater comes in a number of weights, patterns, and colors. The lightest in weight is but a few ounces and will be fine for warm weather wear. "Big Bill" Tilden has done much to popularize this model, and it will be a favorite with tennis devotees, being worn to and from the courts and between sets. To meet all needs there are of course medium and heavy weight slipovers.

Members of athletic and social clubs, students of schools and colleges will be able to obtain the sweaters in their own colors. These colors frequently appear in stripes about the neck and the waist. Plain solid colors, too, will be greatly worn and there will be a wide choice in fancy colors, of which the illustration shown above is a very good example. The front and back consists of a pattern of canary yellow, brown, heather, and blue, while the sleeves are in a solid heather mixture. Brown, canary and heather stripes appear around the smart V neck.

When it comes to bringing in the local stations (which, after all, are the best in the world) nothing is better than the ordinary crystal for faithful reproduction, clarity and naturalness of tone.

The crystal has its disadvantages, however, in that it is unstable and hard to adjust. One must experiment long and patiently in order to find a sensitive spot on the crystal and when after much trouble a sensitive spot has been found a slight accidental jar is enough to get the crystal out of adjustment again.

These faults may be remedied by the use of crystal detectors of the "fixed" type, that is, those that need very little or no adjustment. These fixed detectors are of three general types: a crystal with a cat whisker permanently attached or sealed to a sensitive spot, two crystals pressing against each other and making contact at one or more sensitive spots, and electrolytic detectors which really are not crystals at all, but are made with chemical pastes that have the property of rectifying or "detecting" radio waves.

All three types have their disadvantages. In the first type the permanently connected spot slowly loses its sensitivity and becomes inefficient. In the second type the crystals become oxidized after a time and do not work well. In the electrolytic detectors the paste gradually dries up or is changed by the action of the current passing through it.

The Ideal Detector. Obviously, then, the ideal fixed crystal detector would be one which would stay "fixed" when a sensitive spot was found and which would allow adjustments to be made in the event of the original adjustment losing its sensitivity after a period of use.

Such a detector can be easily made by any radio fan from a few simple parts found in every home.

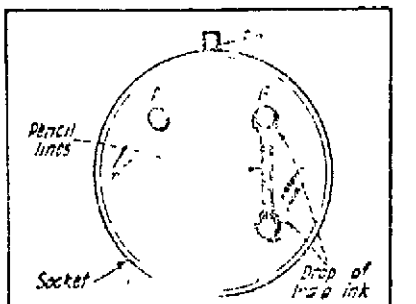

The materials needed are: A small spool, a crystal; a small dowel stick; two small brass angles; two small machine screws; two small bolts with nuts; 2 feet No. 26 or 28 wire.

The spool is first sandpapered until

Efficient Grid Leak Can Be Made on Base of Tube

By WILFORD LAHMAN

An efficient grid leak can be made directly on the base of the tube, and will give excellent results. Holding the tube with the base facing you, having the pin up as shown in the diagram, the top and bottom posts on the right are the grid and filament terminals respectively. A drop of India ink is placed at the base of these posts and allow to dry. Several pencil lines are now drawn from one drop to the other according to the resistance of the leak desired. Best results will usually be had by connecting the positive terminal of the "A" battery to the leak.

China Cups and Bowls to Make Loud Speaker

An emergency loud speaker can easily be made by putting each telephone receiver of a headset in an ordinary china cup, with the ear cap down. The volume obtainable is often astonishing. Round cut glass fruit bowls, or wooden chopping bowls are also quite effective. If the bottom of the dish is rather flat, the 'phone must be propped up by a couple of match sticks. Working along the same lines, picture frames and window panes can be experimented with. A very novel effect can be had by hanging a loud-speaker unit, or a particularly good earphone, against a window which is draped with curtains. If an unsuspecting person is then seated Barytes Deposits Found. Important deposits of barytes of unsurpassed purity are being developed in South Australia.

Road Builders Use Scrap Rubber. Scrap rubber, spread on in liquid form, is used for road surface dressing in Ceylon.

It is clean and smooth. A strip of sandpaper about 6 inches by 1 inch is then rolled into a narrow tube and pushed back and forth a few times through the hole in the spool. The spool is then held to the lips and the breath blown forcefully through the hole to expel the sawdust.

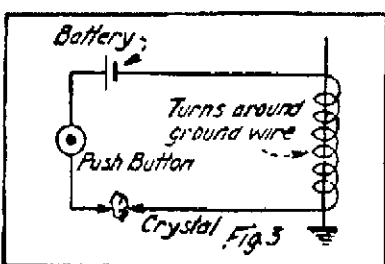

The dowel stick is now split in half lengthwise and a 12-inch length of No. 26 or 28 wire is placed between the two halves so that about three-sixteenths of an inch of the wire projects from the end of the dowel stick, as shown in Fig. 2. The stick is then pushed into the spool hole about one-fourth of the length of the spool and is then cut off flush with the end of the spool. Care should be taken not to break the wire in cutting off the surplus end of the stick.

A crystal is now broken into little pieces by a heavy blow with a large headed hammer. These pieces are tested for sensitivity by the method shown in Fig. 3.

Crystal Sifted Into Spool.

The most sensitive pieces are then pulverized into a coarse powder with the hammer. Care should be taken not to touch the crystal grains with the fingers, since this would spread a thin film of oil over them and render them practically useless. These grains are scooped up with a piece of clean paper and sifted into the open end of the spool hole until the hole is about three-fourths full.

Then another cat whisker is made from the rest of the dowel stick and another 12-inch length of wire and pushed into the open end of the hole. These dowel sticks should fit very tightly, so that some pressure is required to force them into the spool hole, otherwise some of the crystal grains may fall out.

The two small brass angles are now attached to the ends of the spool by means of the machine screws (Fig. 1). The detector is then placed on the panel or base and the holes for mounting it are marked and drilled. Fig. 1 shows how the detector is mounted. The wires leading from the cat whiskers are wound around or soldered to the leads of the bolts and connections to the set are made from lugs placed between the two nuts on the ends of each bolt.

When all is completed the detector may be given a really businesslike appearance by two or three coats of shiny black enamel.

To adjust the detector, tap the thin part of the spool with the end of a pencil. A sensitive spot will soon be found. If after use the adjustment loses its sensitivity somewhat a few more taps with the pencil will again make the crystal "bring home the bacon."—New York Sun and Globe.

Avoid Oscillation

The main difficulty with homemade radio frequency amplifiers is that the tubes go into oscillation, and in such condition the only thing received will be howls and squeals. The same applies to a neodyne set, unless the neutralizing condensers are properly adjusted. In this latter type of set the squeals and whistles are supposed to be neutralized out.

SHORT CIRCUITS

Single circuit tuners may be made more selective by using a short antenna. When the storage battery runs down, just when company is coming to hear the set, connect a dry cell in series with the battery and you can receive the concerts as well as formerly.

By connecting the variable condensers in the correct manner all capacity effect from the operator's hands will be eliminated; therefore if there is any capacity noted in a set shift the connections to the condensers.

A makeshift vernier may be made by using a pencil with a rubber on one end. The rubber is placed on the panel and touching the edge of the dial. By turning the pencil the dial will turn slowly.

It must be understood that a loosely coupled variocoupler of the three-circuit design is by far much more selective than that of the close-coupled tuner.

A loose binding post on a panel is a source of annoyance. This may be prevented by the use of small lock washers, which may be put under the nut at the rear of the panel before the nut is tightened down.

Another Use for Corncob. A paste derived from the corncob may be used as a binder in the manufacture of fiber and wall board.

Trust Will Breed Trust. Trust men, and they will be true to you; trust them gently, and they will show themselves great.—Emerson.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A "Smart" Dress for Mother's Girl.
4755. Accepted styles for girls include sleeveless effects in over blouse or jumper style. The model here portrayed is made with a separate guimpe, and the jumper is attached to the skirt. This could be reversed, and the jumper finished separately. The guimpe may be of broadcloth, tulle, lace and the dress of crepe, gingham, pongee or alpaca.

The pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. A 10 year size requires 1 1/2 yard of 32 inch material for the guimpe and 2 1/2 yards of 1 1/2 inch material for the dress.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Catalogue Notice.

Send 15c in coin or stamps for our up-to-date spring and summer catalogue, containing 350 designs of ladies' and misses' and children's patterns, a concise and comprehensive article on dressmaking, also some points for the needle (illustrating 30 of the various, simple stitches, all valuable hints to the home dress-maker.)

WILL ENTERTAIN WOMEN AT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

The Women's Committee to entertain delegates to the Democratic National Convention in New York City in June has opened offices in the Hotel Commodore there, and is perfecting its arrangements. Left to right are Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, treasurer; Mrs. William H. Good, Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Miss Elsiebeth Marbury, chairman; Miss Annie Mathews and M. S. John Quinn.

ONE CENT A WORD ADVS. BRING RESULTS

Busy Sunday in Town of Ulster

The town of Ulster has been so populated by five of its residents since Saturday. James McEwen and Charles Wright were brought in by State Trooper Melrose and Constable Charles McCallum, each having been held for the grand jury by Justice of the Peace Walter White at Flatbush on a charge of carrying a revolver without a permit. A revolver for Holland who was arrested on a similar charge was discharged.

James Grey and Marion Brown were committed until this evening when they will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace White, each on a charge of assault in the third degree, committed at East Kingston. David Wootton who was arrested at East Kingston for being drunk and disorderly will also have a hearing this evening at Flatbush.

CURRENT OFFERINGS

AT THE THEATERS

At the Opera House tonight the feature photograph "Scaramouche" will be shown. This picture will also be shown Tuesday and Wednesday.

At the Keeney Theatre tonight and on Tuesday and Wednesday "Mystery" will be screened.

At the Auditorium tonight "Wings" starring standing and Marguerite Marsh in "The Lion's Mouth" will be shown. The story of a girl's photo to save her brother from death at the hands of a notorious gang of blackguards.

The Cartwright Players supported by Sue Higgins open their engagement at the Orpheum Theatre today. The play for today and tomorrow is "The Crooked Path," a comedy drama in four acts. The company comes highly recommended.

Busy Sunday in Town of Ulster

The town of Ulster has been depopulated by five of its residents since Saturday. James McDee and Charles Wright were brought in by State Trooper Metzger and Constable Charles McCullough, each having been held for the grand jury by Justice of the Peace Walter Webber at Flatbush on a charge of carrying a revolver without a permit. Sylvester Holland who was arrested on a similar charge was discharged. James Grey and Martell Felton were committed until this evening when they will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Webber, each on a charge of assault in the third degree, committed at East Kingston. David Womby who was arrested at East Kingston for being drunk and disorderly will also have a hearing this evening at Flatbush.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, May 19.—Hearings marked trading at the opening of the stock market today. Pressure was exerted against leading industries, but railroad shares were neglected.

Uncertainty regarding the fate of the bonus measure in the senate and the effect on tax legislation in case that bill would be re-passed over the presidential veto was reflected in dull and reactionary price movements. Steel common was singled out as a medium through which to unsettle the general list.

Troopers Arrest Rosendale Violators.

Because they drive their automobiles in a reckless manner in Rosendale village, four arrests of violators were made Saturday evening by State Troopers. They were arraigned before Justice of the Peace James Brown. A Kingston youth paid a fine of $2, and two violators living in Rosendale were fined while another received a suspended sentence.

Convicted.

A young fellow was engaged in a clerical capacity by a friend of his father. He was, however, shiftless, and nothing he said could be relied upon.

One day his employer called him into his private office and gave him a lecture. He dwelt chiefly on his pravarication and wound up by saying: "You know, James, that you are always lying."

"Sir," said James, "I would have you remember that I am a gentleman."

"There you go again," said his employer.

Kitten No Longer.

"What became of that little kitten you had?" asked a visitor of a small boy.

"Why, haven't you heard?"

"No. Was it drowned?"

"No."

"Lost?"

"No."

"Poisoned?"

"No."

"Then what did become of it?" said the visitor.

"It grew up into a cat."

THE FROZEN TRUTH

By MARTHA WILLIAMS

(© 1924, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"No! I don't believe it! I can't! But—who says so?" Mrs. Lent ejaculated as her gossip, Miss Merton, half-fell into the nearest chair. She gasped from it. "Well, it's so! I didn't believe it either, until Jim Crane swore good and hard he was telling the frozen truth."

"Does he know it? I doubt it!" Mrs. Lent said pointedly.

Miss Merton sat straighter: "He knew it this time," she said. "On the way here I met Judge Shields—whom I asked what the Jess Allens were doing up at the courthouse, he snapped—'you know his mean way.' 'Tendin' to their own affairs, madam—a mighty fine example to all of us.' That shows they must have affairs—"

"I don't just see it that way," Mrs. Lent interrupted.

Miss Merton rose, saying acidly over her shoulder: "Of course you don't! Fact is, Becky, you're mad because I got the big news first—seem to think it's your privilege to head off the rest of us tellin' anything. This time I'm ahead—and I'll stay there if my legs hold out. Good-by now—and don't you try any 'phone tricks. I can see three people while you're gettin' Central to give you one."

A speechless Mrs. Lent looked after her, even running to the window to see the way she went. But Miss Merton had darted round the corner.

An hour later early hearers of the news—that old Jess Allen's missing will had been found—when they came to repeat it, added to it. Thus by the time it reached the end of Main street, and turned the corner of Market, the tale ran that the missing will cut off young Jess—who was no real grandson but a third cousin adopted—with a bare thousand dollars; that he got fifty thousand outright—the rest going to charity—hence it was clear somebody had had to do with hiding the document so long; that his share was contingent upon whom he married.

After that the favorite version was that Old Jess had picked a bride for him. Unless he found her right away he'd find himself a pauper. So fascinating was this it went almost straight through half a dozen tellings to the hearers all agreeing that the will-finding was lucky, yet a shame.

Young Jess was as good as engaged to Molly Bean—one or two knew positively Molly's mother was just about to announce the wedding day. More conservative hearers shook their heads over this—but all minds agreed that if the will had to be found it was well to have it in evidence before things were done past undoing.

Then the gossip-wind veered to make Granny Allen the storm-center. As she'd have only her legal third if ever she even thought of marrying again. Over that it was to laugh—Granny was all of sixty-five, and not the least bit flirt, even if she was mighty spry for her age. But if she had got the place, and most of the property, no tellin' what mightn't happen. Plenty of men would try to marry anybody with a hundred thousand in cold cash, not to name a fine farm!

Old Jess had known what he was about—it was really right down town—in his takin' thought this way for the wife he had bullied so stoutly all through their forty years together. But with all the money hers she could make Young Jess walk chalk—and three people at least were sure she'd have him walking away from Molly Bean.

Mid-afternoon found all the better residence streets buzzing and milling over the case. Curiosity as to how Molly would take it was so great the Bean knocker sounded at least once in each five minutes. At first the callers made simple errands—Molly sat smiling and happy, playing with the puppy that was her latest anonymous gift. Nobody dared ask leading questions, but presently the stream of before dumb inquirers made Molly's mother turn on the ninth person, asking sharply: "See here! What's up? Has the bank broke? Or Judge Shields eloped with Billy Bayly—she's the only woman he's ever allowed in his office? Or are there new twins at the parsonage? Must be something mighty strange to set all of you runnin' about like ants when water's spilled on 'em!"

"Why, don't you know? Haven't you heard?" came in varying chorus. Molly got up, her cheeks flaming, and stood tall, and defiant before her small mother, as she flung back: "We know—nothing. We have heard—nothing. And we don't care to know—unless it concerns us—intimately."

Unwise truly—but she was a girl of spirit—it was young Jess' honest that she "didn't know how to be afraid."

With lifted heads or shaking ones the inquirers melted away. Then Molly herself went news gathering—and came back with a sorry gist. For by that time the story had solidified into a stout declaration that Young Jess needs must choose between love and money—Love was not concretely mentioned—the gossips let it be understood. But categorically they agreed—"upon the best authority, my dear girl," that the young fellow was head-over-bound, and fortune bound, by the dead hand of his benefactor.

Molly's head was as high as ever when she left her informant—she was on the point of going elsewhere for news, when she met Jim Crane—the Original Source. He grinned at her, swept off his hat in its wildest flourish and called across the street: "We've been makin' history up at the courthouse today, Miss Molly. Providence town ain't been so stirred up by nothin' else that's happened since William was first elected." Molly fancied he looked at her—so she waved in return and even called over her shoulder to him: "Don't forget to come and tell me all about it."

She was determined to send back the winking diamond Young Jess had put on her finger less than a month back. She had not worn it except in the privacy of her own room—no nobody need know she had ever had it. She had no doubt of her sweetheart—he was in the grip of cruel circumstances. She knew his ardent and affectionate gratitude to the pair who had given him everything. He would break with them, break Granny's heart, if Molly bade him do it. She could not do it—she would not. Not if it broke her own young heart, and kept her alone all her life. So she called over the telephone quite clearly, leaving a message, as Jess was away from Judge Shields's office, then bustled herself making a small, dainty packet—a string of pink coral given her at graduation, a tiny wrist watch long past use, a litter of frivolous anniversary rings, and in the midst of them the ting-ting with the blue true-love knot from which it had hung about her neck. Jess would understand—she had only to say, "I know—about everything," and wish him goodspeed. He was too true bred to complain. As she got thus far in her musings, she was suddenly seized upon, hugged to breathlessness, with kisses raining on forehead and eyelids, Jess the while whispering ecstatically: "Oh! you darling! To call me—but I'd have come anyway the minute I could."

Silently she pressed the packet upon him—he stared at it, amazed—then suddenly broke into wild laughter. "Oh! oh!" he shouted. "So they got you, too, with that romance? Pestered me all the way here about who I had to marry. All the truth is—the will gives Granny everything, outright—and we came to town today, so she could change her will to pass it all on to me—and you."

"Frozen truth?" Molly asked, tremulously. "Frozen truth!" Jess echoed, hugging her again.

Recommends Winding of Watch in the Morning

There has always been a mystery about the breaking of the mainspring of the watch and while many efforts have been made to solve the problem and many explanations offered, none is regarded as entirely satisfactory.

What seems to be a very logical one has been recently made by Harry Holton, a watchmaker of Wells River, Vt., who has made some special observations relative to the behavior of watch springs. As a result he recommends persons who carry fine watches to wind them in the morning instead of at night, which seems to be the universal custom.

Persons are more likely to arise at a regular hour than they are to retire regularly and his investigations seem to indicate that this, in a measure, is responsible for the breaking of the mainspring. In 70 cases out of 75, springs have broken at night after winding.

The watch is wound at night after it has been in contact with the body for many hours and has acquired the temperature of the latter. It is wound and then hung in a closet, perhaps, where the temperature is quite different. The rapid cooling of the time-piece affects the mainspring as much as any other part and the change of temperature puts it to a strain which it is unable to withstand.—Providence Journal.

Dental Tools of Gold

Dental tools of gold and ebony, used on the royal molars of Jerome Bonaparte, brother of the great Napoleon and husband to an American girl from Baltimore, Elizabeth Patterson, whose marriage was later annulled because of political reasons and Napoleon's prejudice, are the latest acquisitions in the dental museum of Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill.

Dr. William Rebb, the museum curator, has just returned from Europe, where he picked up dental curios in odd corners of England, France and Italy. One of these is a stone statue of Ste. Apollonia, patron saint of the art of dentistry. This Apollonia, the legend runs, leaped voluntarily into a fire rather than curse her Lord. Previously her captors had struck her in the mouth, knocking out all her teeth, and it is this incident which gained her a place as patroness against tooth-ache.

Trapped

A Weary Willy called at an office the other day.

"Can't give you a job," said the merchant; "two other men here on the same errand."

Just then another man came in and said to the merchant: "I can find work for one of these men." Then, pointing to the last comer, he said: "You come along with me and I'll find you something to do."

In pained and surprised tones, Weary Willy inquired: "Why me?"

Who's Looney Now?

"I suppose we think we are smarter than the Chinese."

"Aren't we?"

"The Chinese are not saying a word. They are getting wheat and pork in exchange for mah jong sets."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Colonials Score Another Shut-Out

D. & H. Generals Fall to Cross Plate Against Morgan and Culliton. Hawks Stars at Bat and at First Base.

While Jack Morgan and Bud Culliton were allowing two meagre hits to the Jugging Generals yesterday afternoon, the Colonials pounded the combined offerings of Lefty Dollard and Monel for eight solid smashes and seven runs. "Tubby" Raskin struck the big blow, a homer over the right field fence in the second with two men aboard the bases. That homer and the two runs scored ahead of it ended the scoring for the second session, which was a hectic one for the big southpaw. The locals combined four hits and a base on balls with three bad and untimely boots by the Generals and the result was six runs, any one of them enough to win yesterday's game.

It was the second shut-out of the current season for the local boxmen and speaks well for the pitching that Manager Schirick is getting from his staff. Hickey hit a looping Texas leaguer in the second and Sandy got the other hit in the ninth inning. The only Railroaders to reach second in safety were Dower, who was passed in the fifth inning and went to second on a passed ball, and Hickey who singled in the second and advanced on Marterer's out. Verily, the Generals had a poor day and it was a perfect drubbing they received.

Coyle opened the big second inning with a single between Sandy and Dower. Sandy let Robins' hot liner get through him and both runners were safe. Dollard threw to catch Coyle of second and the ball went into center field. Kelly Herbst was obliging and gave the ball an extra boot or two and Coyle came all the way home and Robins made third. He scored while Dower was throwing Culliton out at first. Morgan, who seems to be the latest edition of "The Hitting Pitcher," singled to right field. After Dugan fled to Schermerhorn, Dewey walked and Deegan singled to the same right field, scoring Morgan. "Tubby" Raskin took this opportunity to show Julius Dolan that he can hit a left-hander. He poled the ball over the right field wall and set the crowd wild. Grady contributed one of the prettiest plays of the day when he picked Schwab's foul fly out of the air within two feet of the grand stand.

In the third inning Dollard was derickied and Monel went into the box.

The fifth saw the end of the scoring for the day. Schwab walked and was forced out at second by Coyle. Bobby advanced on Robins' out and scored on Bud Culliton's single to right field. Bud was really and genuinely surprised when he saw his offering drop safely in right. The locals put two on the paths in the eighth but failed to put them around. Culliton was hit and Morgan's single, his second for the day, advanced Bud. Dugan and Dewey went out and left the two pitchers on first and second.

It was a patched up team that started the game Sunday. Schirick, the third baseman, who has been with the Schirickmen for the past several games, failed to put in an appearance and Bob Coyle covered third. He handled his one chance nicely. But who was on first? No one but Raskin, outfielder de luxe. "Tubby" filled Coyle's shoes on the initial sack and handled ten chances without a hobble.

Judge Schirick was greatly pleased with Morgan's work and is satisfied that he has his staff of twirlers ready for the summer campaign. He is angling for a new third sacker and if he lands the boy he is after, the fans will be pop-eyed watching him around the hot corner.

K. of C. Nine Beat Rosendale

The Knights of Columbus team won its opening game at Rosendale Sunday, defeating the home club, 4 to 1. Strikeouts were in order throughout the contest; the Knights hit hard at the atmosphere 16 times and the Rosendale outfit 15 times.

The Knights played errorless ball and Komosa was effective in a number of pinches, having been threatened several times. Jim Manning crashed out a three bagger in the opening innings, scoring two runs ahead of him. He himself then scored. In the final inning Keegan hit for the circuit.

Princeton Senior Is Called "Best Man."

Harvey C. Emery, of New York City, has been chosen as the "best man" in the senior class at Princeton University. He was named as the most popular, most respected, best all-around athlete, the busiest and the man who had done more for his class. Emery is president of the senior class and a member of the football and track teams.

HARVEY C. EMERY.

After Lutzke's error in the second, Uhle blew up and the Yankees drove him from the box, scoring six runs and winning the first game from the Indians 8 to 0.

Marberry and Shocker staged a pretty pitching duel until the ninth when the Senators blew up and the Browns romped home with a 6 to 3 victory.

The Phillies smashed their way to a victory over the Cubs, 8 to 5, scoring six runs in the second on two homers, two triples, a double and a single.

Flacks double, sending two runs over the pan in the ninth gave the Cardinals a 5 to 4 victory over the Braves.

The Reds broke their losing streak when they won from the Robins 5 to 4, breaking up a Dodger rally that came within one run of tying the score in the eighth.

The Red Sox tamed the Tigers 5 to 4, driving Cole from the box in the seventh sewing up the game.

STUDEBAKER TEAMS WINNING STREAK INTACT

The Battery A Club lost to Studebakers of East Kingston Sunday in a fast game, score 3 to 7. Doyle on the mound for the brickmaking outfit, had 14 strikeouts to his credit. Delavan also hurled good ball for the soldier boys, but was not given the best of support.
